BUNGLING TRAIN MEN

Caused The Death Of Harahan
And His Three Companions.

THREE OF THEM ARE NAMED

By The Committee Inquiring
Into The Cause Of The Accident.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Negligence on the part of three trainmen, contributed to the Illinois Central wreck at Kinmundy, Ill., Sunday night in which J. T. Harahan, former president of that line, and three other railroad officials were killed, an investigating committee declared here Wednesday.

The trainmen are: Engineer R. J. Stuart, of train No. 3, which crashed into train No. 25; John H. Brainard, conductor of train No. 25, and Harry J. Broecker, flagman on train No. 25.

The board of inquiry finds that the conductor and the flagman of train No. 25, knowing that train No. 3 was following closely, were negligent in not using the means they had in protecting the other train.

The board also finds that the engineer of No. 3 was negligent in not discovering earlier his proximity to train No. 25.

RAILROAD CONTRACT

For Concrete Masonry Awarded to Meacham Company.

The Meacham Contracting Co. has secured the contract for concrete masonry amounting to about $40,000, on the revision of the L. & N. R. R. main line from Nashville to Birmingham. This work is on the first section out of Nashville and the company will establish a branch office at Nashville with T. W. Sparrow who has been Superintendent at the Henderson Branch Office for three years, in active charge of the work.

VICTORY WON BY "DRYS"

Saloons Defeated By a Hundred And Forty-Eight Votes.

WAS A STRENUOUS FIGHT

Big Meeting Held at Night, Result Celebrated by Speeches And Songs.

Madisonville, Ky., Jan. 24.—The "drys" were victorious in the local option election here today, winning by a majority of 148 votes, after one of the hardest fought campaigns the city has ever witnessed. The day's program by the victors started with services in the churches at 5 o'clock this morning and continued throughout the day. Hundreds of school children paraded the streets all day, carrying banners worded in various manner, singing songs and the ladies joined in with prayer service and were active at the polls.

When the result was announced several thousand people, assembled at the courthouse, broke into cheering, and the demonstration was one the like of which was never seen before.

Tonight a big meeting was held at the tabernacle, the building being crowded to overflowing, and the victory was celebrated by speeches and songs. The majority was one vote less than two years ago, when the city went dry by a majority of 149. The colored people took an active part in the fight, and to them much credit is due for the victory, as the colored vote is large.

Kitty Dope.

Cairo is quite active in Baseball matters this season. Flood has been released as manager and Carl Pace, of Tulsa, Okla., will manage the team this year.

The proposed greater Kitty League is to consist of the cities of Cairo, Paducah, Evansville, Vincennes, Henderson, Hopkinsville, Clarksville, East St. Louis, Belleville and Decatur, eight of these cities to compose the circuit.

Hopkinsville will have to raise $2,000 to stay in the League, a good deal more than last season.

COUNTY UNIT BILL PASSED

Put Through Senate By Twenty-four To Fourteen On Thursday.

NOW GOES TO GOVERNOR

Other Messages Have Been Acted Upon Favorably In One House or The Other.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 26.—The Huffer Bill offered as a substitute for the Graham county unit bill and favored by the liquor people, was defeated by 22 to 16 in the Senate yesterday.

The original bill passed by a vote of 24 to 14.

Vote on the Bill.

The lineup on the bill was as follows:

For the Bill—Senators B. M. Arnett, W. J. Bale, P. J. Beard, E. Bertram, J. E. Biggerstaff, Hiram M. Brock, J. R. Catlett, John H. Durham, W. V. Eaton, W. A. Frost, Seldon R. Glenn, J. C. Graham, R. L. Hubble, Starling L. Marshall, W. B. Moody, Hermann D. Newcomb, J. T. Prichard, R. M. Salmon, H. G. Sanders, M. C. Scott, Claude M. Thomas, B. F. Tichenor, J. T. Tunis and W. F. Welch.

Against—Senators L. W. Arnett, T. F. Bagby, John W. Berkshire, J. F. Bosworth, Gus Brown, I. B. Chipman, N. R. Coburn, W. E. Dowling, Webster Helm, E. E. Hogg, Commodore Holman, Hite Huffer, Dr. C. W. Mathers and Mark Ryan.

The House has begun to vote on the measures before the Legislature, and the first ones have been given approval. The bills that have been voted on favorably include a measure affecting fourth class cities which provides for the reconstruction of streets one half at the cost of property owners and one-half at the cost of the city and street railways; one giving the commonwealth's attorney in Jefferson county a stenographer at $1,200 a year; one giving the Jefferson county clerk an assistant clerk for the juvenile court.

By a vote of 62 to 25, the House adopted the bill permitting women to vote in school elections in Kentucky. A number of amendments were beaten.

Compromise Prison Bill.

Suggestion is now being made of a compromise prison bill, which will provide for a bi-partisan board, with the understanding that in addition to two republicans, the governor will reappoint Brown and McCutcheon to serve two years longer or for the time they were originally chosen.

Hearst Accepts.

A telegram was received from W. R. Hearst, accepting an invitation to address the assembly.

KENTUCKY BOARD OF HEALTH UNDER FIRE

Dr. J. N. McCormack of Bowling Green on the Grill for Two Hours at Frankfort.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 25.—The state board of health is not a "machine-dominated" organization. Dr. J. N. McCormack, of Bowling Green, who has been secretary of the board for 30 years says it is not. He made a statement to the commission on the Kentucky statutes which had been charged with the consideration of Representative L. B. Herrington's bill providing for the re-organization of the body.

Mr. Herrington conducted the examination. He had Dr. McCormack, who had been subpoenaed, on the grill for two hours in an effort to

In his preliminary statement to the committee Mr. Herrington declared Dr. McCormack was too brilliant a man to be at the head of any machine. "He's the smartest, the most plausible, powerful and persuasive lobbyist who ever visited Frankfort," declared Mr. Herrington.

Dr. McCormack smiled blandly throughout the arraignment. "You'll have more respect for me after this hearing than you ever entertained for me before in your life," he said calmly, when Mr. Herrington had done.

Modest Begum.

The Begum of Bhopal is an important female ruler in India. She was the only woman ruler among the throng of Indian princes who did homage to King George at the late Durbar at Delhi. Religion and etiquette require that the Begum should never expose the tiniest bit of her skin in public. So she appeared swathed in silks, so that her form was hardly distinguishable, her face heavily veiled, and even her hands hidden.

For Women Only.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont of New York, says she is planning to start a daily newspaper to be managed by women and devoted entirely to their interests. She declared that women do not have a fair representation in the news of the day and thinks the time is ripe for women to come to the front editorially.

Far Reaching Decision.

Liquor interests won a far-reaching victory in the United States Supreme Court by a decision that railroads must carry beer, when offered for transportation into "dry counties" of another State. The decision affected particularly shipments from Indiana into Kentucky. The court held that beer and intoxicating liquors were legitimate commodities of commerce under the interstate law.

A Song Writer's Romance.

"When the Right Little Girl Loves You"—has been the inspiration of the greatest and grandest acts in the lives of most men, and Mr. Joe Bren, the popular composer and song writer, is no exception to the rule, as his latest song hit proves.

There is a very pretty romance connected with his courtship and recent marriage. One day, while strolling along the beach, in tow of Dan Cupid you may be sure, drinking in the pure ozone, finding new chords and themes in the beating of the waves upon the sand, in the whistling of the wind and never-ceasing cries of sea birds he met "the right little girl."

Dan Cupid always has one eye open for just "the right little girl" for some fellow. Of a sudden, Dan Cupid spied, under the depths of a big parasol, the mischievous blue eyes of "just the right little girl," and he tugged and tugged at his companion's sleeve until he, too, stopped, looked and discovered those same blue eyes and promptly decided that Dan Cupid was the right man on the right job at the right time.

Then followed a pretty romance—friends—lovers—engaged—papa's stern refusal—the quiet marriage—winning fathers (forgiveness)—then that complete happiness that comes from the union of two souls. That the happy bride is exceptionally pretty and an hairdresser only adds heart interest to the story.

With his dainty bride as muse, Mr. Bren has portrayed the romance of his life in the words of his latest beautiful catchy song, "When the Right Little Girl Loves You," which is rapidly proving itself one of the big popular musical hits of the season, both with the profession and the public. This song, as well as Mr. Bren's popular hits, "Just One Word From You," and "If You But Knew" is published by the J. W. Jenkins Sons Music Co., Kansas City, Mo.—Kansas City Star.

LETTER FROM FAR OFF SIAM

WRITTEN TO HER MOTHER

Interesting Account of a Hopkinsville Girl's Life in Mission Field.

Chiang Mai, Laos, April 20, 1911.

All this week, we have been enjoying the most delightful showers, a very grateful relief from the long dry season. It is too early for the rains to begin yet, and I can't say I enjoy that season, but I suppose the drouth is broken. The first rain was last Saturday afternoon. The girls came down from the hill that morning, in time to do their washing for Sunday. But Miss Buck stayed up until Sunday morning, so I had to watch the girls and it was very trying. New Year week is the one time in all the year, when the boys and girls are allowed to play together, and you may know the boys improve their opportunity. If I had charge of the school, I should not allow them to come on the premises, New Year or not. But Miss Buck allows it, and I was uneasy all day, knowing they were on the place, playing with the girls, and one of the boys even came up-stairs, but I sent him down in a hurry. But we were invited out to Nawng Patit, about a mile from here, that afternoon, and I was glad when the time came, and I got the girls out of town. Our matron has just built her a new house, and we went out to attend the dedicatory exercises, and ate our supper there. As I may have mentioned before, one of the leading features of New Year time is throwing of water. Men and women parade the streets, in crowds, bearing big bowls of water and every passer-by is treated to a "sousing." The girls had told me that they were going to "hoat" me Saturday afternoon, so I went in an old dress, expecting to come home drenched. But while we were eating supper, a very heavy shower came up, and we had to wait some time before we could start home, and it was quite dark when we finally got there. So the girls' fun was spoiled, and we all got our "ducking" from the skies, instead.

Outside the temples, on high poles, are floating hundreds of player flags, of all colors, the flags being about a foot wide, and ten or fifteen yards long. They float gaily in the breeze, and every time the wind tosses them up, they are supposed to pull the person for whom they were raised, so far out of hell. Sunday was Easter, and we had a very elaborate service arranged. I played the violin, and all three of the schools sang, our girls best of all. Every one spoke of how beautiful the anthem was. Dr. Briggs, who is very fond of music, was there, and seemed to enjoy it. He had intended going home the Friday before, but early that morning, the stork visited the McCluers, and brought them a baby girl, so he had to stay over. The Whites are coming down from the hills to-morrow, and hope to start home next week, though he is still very weak, and we are afraid that he will not be able to take the trip. He came down early this week for a day, and just the ride in jolting him up very much; so that doesn't look as if he could stand six days' riding. They are going to be with us until they leave. I hear the railroad is moving. When I came up, it took three days to make the trip from Railhead to Pre, and now it is only one day's journey. But it is still far enough from Chiang Mai, to make us feel safe from the cholera epidemic (or I believe it is something like pneumonia) that is sweeping Asia and Europe. So you see there are some advantages in being far from a railroad.

Miss Buck and I had a good laugh over your idea that screens would be cheaper than mosquito nets. In our dormitory, there are eight enormous windows, and five double doors, with large transoms. Then wiring netting is not manufactured in Siam, and would have to be imported, and would cost its weight in gold by the time it got here. Then these little heathen could never be taught to keep the doors shut, or the screens in.

You must all know, from my letters home, that I have been very happy this year, though my chief task has necessarily been the acquiring of this language. This is a very dry subject, so as I thought you might be interested to know something of the religion of these people, I will tell you of

Ancestor Worship Among The Laos.

Buddhism, in the Laos country, has been so mixed with the worship of spirits, as to have lost almost all resemblance to the parent religion. By whatever name they may be called, the religions or beliefs of all primitive and uncultured people have at least two common characteristics: (1) A belief in many gods, and (2) a worship of all these gods through fear. Among all idolaters, the gods that have the most gorgeous temples and the greatest number of offerings and worshippers, are those most blood-thirsty and cruel. The idea of a God of love is so foreign to them, it is small wonder that they fail to grasp it at first, and that old people often say: "I want all my grand-children to become Christians, for I believe all you tell me about a Saviour, but I am too old to change," or that our converts sometimes go back to their demon-worship at times of misfortune, in hope of averting the wrath of the spirits. I find many superstitions among the Laos to remind me of the negroes of the south, and I suppose one would find a like similarity in the beliefs of all primitive peoples.

The Laos believe that at death the spirit of the departed takes up its abode at the place where its owner passed away. So rather than have the home infested by spirits, the sick are often taken out to the pig sty, or the roadside, and left to die. No matter how dearly beloved one has been in life, their spirits are greatly feared, and must be appeased by offerings of food, flowers, and even clothing. It is needless to say that those who profit by such a belief are the priests. Last term, we had a death in our school, and though the girl died in the hospital, for nights no one would sleep in the part of the room where she had lain, but all our Christian (!) girls cuddled together in the opposite side of the room, with their umbrellas raised; evidently being ignorant of the belief in civilized America, that to raise an umbrella in the house is "bad luck."

Recently, a Laos of high rank, who lives just back of us, gave an all-day entertainment to his ancestors, and was kind enough to allow me to take some pictures—not of the ancestors, but of their descendants. In the paved court-yard, a booth had been erected, under which the customary ceremonies took place. In the rear was a shelf, upon which was placed flowers and raw meat, for the delectation of the departed. Underneath and at the sides, were hung some fifty scarfs of every conceivable texture and color, for the dancing women. From the ceiling was suspended a long strip of white cloth, at which each woman took her turn. They swing around on this until thoroughly dizzy, after which they are supposed not to know anything that goes on, and sometimes dance until they fall from exhaustion. They often use liquor, to produce a rapture, though I saw no evidences of drinking at this place.

The band consisted of seven pieces, most of them being purely rhythmic. These people seem to have very few tunes and the one they played all day long is the first I heard on my arrival in the country. It is very plaintive, a strain of five measures that ends on the fifth of the key, and of all the sounds and sights, it alone seemed to belong to an unseen world. In its ceaseless repetition, with never a note, to bring it to a close, it seems like some wandering spirit seeking in vain for a resting place. The rhythm is as peculiar as the melody. The time is 4-4, and the accents come in this way: ONE and TWO and THREE and FOUR and; or, on one, the ANDS of the 2nd and 3rd beats, and on 4.

After each dancer has swung around on the cloth until she is dizzy, she comes out in front and begins to dance. It is said that the Oriental always does things backwards, and so with the Laos "Salome." She starts out rather timidly, though not considered immodest here, and adds her seven veils, as the dance proceeds, selecting from the pile before her. She first winds one around her head, and sticks bunches of flowers behind her ears. Then she steps into an extra skirt or two—or rather, dances into them—and begins to wind the scarfs about her shoulders and waist. By the time she is through, she looks like an animated rag-bag, or the victim of a railroad accident, who has just left the surgeon.

While all this dressing has been going on, she has also tied strings around the wrists of the spectators, to protect them from the "pees," or spirits; all the while keeping time to the music with her feet.

The "fawning," or dancing, in Laos, is very different from the American dances, the movements being executed almost entirely with the arms, hands and fingers, instead of the feet. From early childhood the people bend their fingers in all sorts of ways, to make them supple. And they acquire a freedom of motion in all the joints of the arm, that is unknown to us. The movements, too, seem to be aesthetic, rather than rhythmic, and with bunches of flowers held between the fingers, their bright colored draperies and graceful movements, they made quite a pretty picture.

Where a man is wealthy, he will spend a hundred dollars on an entertainment of this kind. And it seemed to be rather an occasion of merry-making, having nothing of what we would consider a religious spirit. In fact, all the pleasures these people have are in connection with religious rites. And it seems to me that the difficult thing is not that they shall change their gods, but that they may be brought to a realization of what true worship means. Pray for us, that our efforts to teach them about our Saviour may be blessed by Him who died for us.

Yours, with much love,
LUCY STARLING.

Purifying a State

Pennsylvania, the favorite hunting ground of the muckraker, actually has a health department with four thousand employees, everyone of whom is holding his job, not by order of the "organization," but solely by the saving grace of fitness and industry, which is disbursing millions of dollars and receiving full value for every nickel. And the results that the four thousand have accomplished and are still achieving are impressive and inspiring.

While some folks thought a health department was a good thing to make other people behave themselves, they resented any attempt to interfere with their own liberty to do as they pleased. Thus, when twenty hogs died of cholera their owner refused to bury them. When the department of health notified him to abate the nuisance, he allowed that he would do as he darn pleased on his own land. It required a fine of twenty five dollars to induce him to revise his opinion.

This was bad enough for an uneducated farmer; but what is to be said of a manufacturing town which upon being ordered to make certain changes in its water supply, engaged a lawyer to fight the department's order, then sent a deputation accompanied by the lawyer to protest to the commissioner, Dr. Dixon. Dr. Dixon waited until the deputation was out of breath, then produced data from his own engineers, who had measured the flow of the stream that supplied the town with water. The intake of the water works was just a little dam on one side of the stream while a sewer discharged on the opposite bank. The engineer's measurements proved that the stream did not furnish water enough to supply the town if it had not been re-augmented by the sewage poured into the pond. The deputation turned and watched at the knees upon receiving this disquieting information. They had not another word to say. Dr. Dixon thereupon dismissed his callers with a funny story; but somehow, thought the laugh came at the proper place. It seemed to like spontaneity and sprightliness. The changes ordered were made with alacrity.—From "Saving 27,000 Lives in One State," Technical World Magazine.

Helpless as a Baby.

Valley Heights, Va.—Mrs. Jennie B. Kirby, in a letter from this place, says: "I was sick in bed for nine months, with womanly troubles. I was so weak and helpless at times that I could not raise my head off the pillow. I commenced to take Cardui, and I saw it was helping me at once. Now, I can work all day." As a tonic for weak women, nothing has been found, for fifty years, that would take the place of Cardui. It will surely do you good. Cardui is prepared from vegetable ingredients, and has a specific curative effect on the womanly organs. Try a bottle today. At your druggist's.

Virginia Tragedy.

Miss Eva Chambers, a young schoolteacher, was shot and killed near her school at Lockett's store in Roanoke county Va., Thursday by Joshua Raines, who later shot and wounded Charles Day, one of his neighbors, and then surrendered himself to the police authorities.

The killing of Miss Chambers is the direct result of a suit for slander instituted by her against Mrs. Raines, wife of the man who did the killing. The slander suit was instituted after Mrs. Raines had attempted to oust Miss Chambers as teacher. It was then that Mrs. Raines is alleged to have circulated reports reflecting upon Miss Chambers' character. Raines' only motive for attempting to kill Charles Day was because of the interest that Day had taken in Miss Chambers. The grudge that Raines held against the young woman began when she left his home as a boarder and took up her residence with Day and his wife.

RECEIPTS ARE AGAIN LARGE

Tobacco Market Shows Increased Activity With Open Weather.

THE PRICES REMAIN FIRM.

Factories and Warehouses Are Receiving Deliveries on Private Sales.

Tobacco receipts have picked up largely since the change in the weather and good sales were held this week at all of the loose floors. Prices are not materially changed from those prevailing since the first of the year. No fine grades are being sold. Receipts are also heavy at the warehouses where many crops have been bought at private sales. Much of the tobacco being delivered is on these contracts.

A good deal of tobacco is being shipped into the city by railroad, especially over the Illinois Central. The highest price realized on the loose floor this week was a lot sold by Cooper & Co. at $13.25.

BURNT CORK.

Moredock and Watson's Famous Minstrels Coming.

Coming to the Opera House, Feb. 3, are the Moredock and Watson famous minstrels, carrying a feature band and orchestra under the personal direction of Mr. Vern Cluette and an acting personnel that are said to be the peers of any in similar line.

Headed by Moredock and Watson "The Ragtime Kings," the company includes, Trombone Buddy Moredock, Billy Van Allen, Effie Graham, the Cluette Brothers, the Delmar Brothers and as a special feature Clinton Delmar, the sensation of the minstrel world, whose impersonations of femininity are said to be truly artistic.

Newspapers in general are highly eulogistic regarding this attraction and that their performance is refined to the extreme adds much to its value as an amusement medium for all classes.

A street parade will be given at 11:45 a. m. and a concert in front of the Opera House at 7:30 in the evening.

Timid Doe Finds There is Some Good After All in the White Biped of the City.

The heart of a deer, a poor, timid, pretty little doe, must have been near to bursting with gratitude a few days ago. Somewhere up among the pines in the moonlight she must surely have found a way, dumb-brute though she is, to tell her companions of the antlered tribe how good after all are the white bipeds of the city when the hunting season is over.

Out of the maelstrom of queer sights and scenes of snoring, puffing monsters that ran on wheels and uttered terrifying metallic sounds in which she found herself she was transported back to her native environment—in a motor car.

Poor, little trembling creature. She shook and covered and looked as though she were gazing upon the end from her great liquid eyes. They took her back to the mountains, loosened their hold upon the soft neck and said to her: "Go, little girl."

She hesitated a minute, then, realizing what to her was doubtless something beyond all belief, she sprang from the tonneau of the motor car and in three bounds was out of sight.

Whatever caused the animal to stray into the city from some one of the nearby canyons no one knows.—Los Angeles Times.

Work on Sewer.

The work of putting in the Tenth Street sewer near Water Street, is in progress this week. The contractors are using collapsible steel forms and several sections were put in yesterday at the deepest point, where the banks have shown some indications of crumbling. The excavation at the deepest place is 12 or 14 feet deep. Very little stone has been found so far.

How Learned Linguist Brought Relief to Situation That Was Becoming Painful.

The guests at a certain stag party were very dry. Considerable time had elapsed since the emptying of the last bottle, and the host, engrossed with anecdotes, had made no move to remedy matters. It was really a serious situation—one that might become at any moment painful.

How relieve it? Chance offered a way.

One of the dry brotherhood, pointing casually to a Latin inscription over the fireplace, asked—just for the sake of saying something:

"Say, what does that inscription mean in English?" Then he turned to another of the guests, known for his prowess as a linguist.

"Surely you can tell us what it means," he said.

The linguist looked the inscription over very, very carefully.

"That," he observed finally, "is a sentence taken from the works of Horace, which, rendered into English, means: 'Said the governor of North Carolina to the governor of South Carolina.'"

Before he could get any further the host woke up. Thereafter, throughout the evening, there was never a lull.—Exchange.

MIDOCLEAN REPORTEER.

As evidence that Englishmen are not without a dry sense of humor, the marquis of Queensberry, now touring the United States, told the following story during his New York visit:

Two Englishmen were paying court to the same American girl on a transatlantic trip. Their steamer chairs were placed on either side of hers, and every fair day the rivals would sit for hours with the fair American, each trying to cut the other out. One of the two was notoriously parsimonious. The men spoke of him as one who "had never bought a drink in his life," and his stinginess was manifested even in the way he smoked his cigars down to the last quarter of an inch.

One morning the English "tightwad," while monopolizing the American girl's entire attention, smoked a cigar until it began to singe his mustache. The other chap watched him languidly as he arose to toss the tiny cigar stump overboard. As he returned from the rail his rival drew his pipe from his mouth and observed:

"I say, old chap, I do hope that won't get in the propeller."

THIRD TIME THE CHARM

Legislative Committees Will Arrive at 10 O'clock This Morning.

TO INSPECT THE ASYLUM.

Joint Committees of Twenty-one Members in The Party.

The Committees from the Senate and House, of 21 members, again notified Superintendent Sights that they would be here to inspect the asylum. The Committees have twice before set a date to come, but postponed the visit.

The day will be spent going over the building and grounds and in eating one of the famous asylum dinners.

It is needless to say that the visitors will find everything in apple pie order. The institution is never any other way.

STATUE MADE OF CONCRETE

That Medium Substituted for Stone in France With Admirable Results.

Reinforced concrete as a constructional material is coming more and more into favor. Recently it was pressed into service for statuary purposes, a fine piece of work in this medium having been completed recently at Espaly, in France.

The statue, which is 48 feet high, crowns a pedestal 24 feet in height, the total height of the monument therefore being 72 feet.

It was intended originally that the statue should be cast in iron, but difficulties arose with the donor, so that he decided ultimately to ascertain the possibilities of reinforced concrete for this purpose. It was a task beset with innumerable and peculiar difficulties; but these were overcome as they arose, and the statue resembles in every way a piece of work in stone.

The statue was divided into four parts—namely, the cylindrical base, a vertical core, a series of horizontal ribs connecting the core with the external shell carrying the contour of the figure, and a special limb to support the uplifted arm. The total weight of the statue is 80 tons.

The perfection of the work has aroused considerable comment, the statue having the appearance of having been carved from a solid block of stone.—Chamber's Journal.

WAS FIRST AMERICAN HOBO

Rip Van Winkle Is Accorded That Distinction by Bishop William A. Quayle.

Bishop William A. Quayle, in his lecture on "The Tragedies of Rip Van Winkle," at the Meridian Street M. E. church recently pronounced empty-handed idleness the scourge of the world. Bishop Quayle termed Rip Van Winkle the "first American hobo," and said that the fact millions of American folk wept as they saw Joseph Jefferson portray this character was no special tribute to the goodness of the character, but a tribute to the genius of the man doing the acting.

Throughout the lecture-sermon, which lasted two hours, ran those terse, epigrammatic sentences his Indianapolis admirers learned to appreciate when Bishop Quayle was pastor of the church in which he spoke. The bishop said Rip Van Winkle appeared at a time when Uncle Sam was so young he didn't wear a collar, and that he was progenitor of the men one sees nowadays doing chores for other housewives instead of their own.—Indianapolis Star.

THE WRONG NAME.

"I fail to see how the name of 'widow bird' fits that citizen of South America," said a woman visitor at the New York zoo. "In the first place, he is not of the right sex to be a widow. You would think from the name that he had to spend most of his life in a lonesome state. Not at all. In the spring he selects from twelve to fifteen wives which nest close together in the meadows and raise a big family. He's a handsome bird and I'm not surprised that he should be able to hypnotize a dozen or more females. I've heard of men just like him."

The speaker stood in front of the cage in which were many small birds from various parts of the world. The widow bird is the size of a bunting, coal black, with a long tail. There is a collar of red feathers about the neck and patches of gray are on the wings.

OZONIZED AIR FOR SUBWAYS.

Ozonized air is to be introduced in one of the underground railways of London, where, particularly, during rush hours, the air is very offensive and consequently injurious. The proposed plan is to filter the air at each station and then pass a portion of it over ozonizers. Then the two will be mixed and part of it be forced into the tunnel.—Popular Mechanics.

LIVES AS POET AND HUMORIST

Thomas Hood Enriched English Literature in His All Too Brief Span of Life.

Thomas Hood, the English poet and humorist, was born May 23, 1799, and died May 3, 1845. From 1821 when he became subeditor of the London Magazine, he devoted himself to a literary life. In 1826 Hood published Whims and Oddities, this being followed by National Tales in prose. There was also a volume of serious poetry which, though well received, did not acquire much popularity. In 1830 he started the Comic Annual, which, during the eight years of its existence, was made the vehicle of many of his most remarkable productions. From 1835 to 1840 Hood lived on the continent because of failing health. His experience while there furnished material for his "Up the Rhine," a series of imaginative letters. The whimsical cuts inserted in the work, as well as its combination of good sense and humor, made it very popular. When he returned to England Hood undertook the editorship of the New Monthly Magazine, and continued it until 1843. The following year he commenced his last periodical, entitled Hood's Magazine. It contains some of his best productions, though several of them were written after his health had completely given way, and while he was propped up by pillows in bed. Hood is unrivaled as a punster, and seems to have been almost an equal master of the comic and pathetic. In the latter style his "Song of the Shirt" is known the world over, and as a burst of poetry and indignation very few works in the English language can compare with it.

THE SWINDLE.

Hiram had just returned from a trip to the city, and was telling of the wonderful sights he had witnessed at the theater. He had saved the stub of his ticket for a souvenir of the great occasion.

His father picked up the piece of cardboard and, after looking at it closely, exclaimed: "Land sakes, Hiram, what did you say you paid for this ticket?"

"One dollar, paw," says Hiram; "an' it was worth it."

"Well, son," exclaimed Hiram, Sr., "you got swindled, sure as fate! Here it says on this ticket, in plain English, 10 Center."—Judge's Library.

THE PEG.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, in a recent address in Denver, said:

"I believe in the future rather than in the past. I despise those ultra-conservatives and reactionaries who hate new things simply because they are new. Precedent!"

Judge Lindsey snapped his fingers.

"Precedent is all very well in its way, but how often is it only the peg on which we're but too glad to hang our misdeeds."

GOOD ARGUMENT.

"Kindly release my hand, Mr. Wombat. I could never learn to love you."

"How do you know you can't if you won't try a sample lesson?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BUY YOUR GROCERIES AT FORBES' IN 1912.

Why not make this one of your "resolutions" for the new year? You want to save all you can, of course; that's why we suggest that you come and try trading with us once. There are other reasons too---and they are almost as important as the saving proposition. For instance---we have the newest and freshest stock of groceries in town, no old shelf-worn, dusty, dirty stuff; we buy in the largest quantities and pay spot cash for same. And as to our prices, although we "don't raise much fuss" about it, WE ALWAYS MEET COMPETITION on anything in our line. Now if you don't believe we do this, call us up at any time and see. We could give you many other reasons why we are "just as nice" as the other fellows, but we'd rather show you. So come give us a trial anyway.

NEW ROUTE TO THE LAKE.

Fiscal Court Orders A Road
Opened from Seventh Street
Northward.

AVOIDS GAINESVILLE HILL.

Land To Be Condemned For About Half a Mile.

The Fiscal Court has made an important order changing the Greenville road again. A few years ago the road was changed from its course near the river to make way for the extension of the Dalton Quarry into the hill over which it passed. The road was diverted around the hill, leaving First street at the Gainesville colored church, just outside the city, and running past the church, making a sharp turn to the east for one hundred yards and then turning at right angles to the north and continuing through the Campbell farm to a junction with the old road just before reaching the Campbell gate. This route ran over a steep hill at Gainesville, that has been very objectionable and being a zigzag course it has never given satisfaction. This road leads to Lake Tandy and the members of the Hunting and Fishing Club have taken a keen interest in getting the road changed so as to avoid the hill and to make a more attractive thoroughfare possible. This movement has met with success and a new route is to be condemned several hundred yards east and opening into Seventh street just beyond the property of Mrs. L. McF. Blake-more. A road is to be condemned from Seventh street, just outside the city limits, northward to the extension of First street, crossing First street several hundred yards east of the Gainesville hill. From First street it runs in a straight line through farm lands to the new road opened through the Campbell farm, leaving the crooks in the old route to the west. This will make the road without a turn from Seventh street to the river two miles north of town. All of the heavy traffic from the Greenville road will come into town from the east instead of the north, if desired, but the old route will be left open. The road will open up some nice building lots in the eastern suburbs and will make one of the most attractive roads leading out of the city.
